COMMENT OF THE DAY

Negative Speech

FOR the most part, Mr. Malenkov's policy speech to the Soviet Council of Nationalities was a tedious repetition of what the world has heard during past months from Mr. Molotov and Mr. Vyshinsky, and was, therefore, not particularly enlightening. The Russian Premier said nothing to suggest that the Kremlin was ready to make any new approach to the chronic political problems which afflict the world and which divide the East and West. So far as Mr. Malenkov is concerned there is still only one way of ensuring the peace and security of Europe—scrapping EDC, with its concomitant West European army, including German divisions, and replacing it with a security pact, the primary conditions for which would be laid down by Russia. This is old stuff—a mixture of propaganda and pacification. It was expounded at the Berlin conference by Mr. Molotov with all the naivety which that accomplished diplomat commands, and the proposal was given due consideration by the foreign ministers of Britain, France and the United States. It was rejected because it failed to approximate a quid pro quo or to guarantee safeguards for any part of Europe other than that dominated by Russia and her satellites. And although similar overtures have now come from an even higher level, they are offered in the same "take it or leave it" tone, which makes them unacceptable even as a basis for further discussion. Thus, to the free world, patiently hoping for an encouraging sign from the Kremlin of a genuine desire to compose international differences, Mr. Malenkov's speech must be regarded as a big disappointment.

It has long been contended by diplomatic observers that speeches made by Russian leaders to the Soviet Parliament are primarily intended for internal consumption, but on Monday Mr. Malenkov clearly had in mind an international audience. It is a pity his speech did not live up to the opportunity of the moment. For what in the world to think about such platitudes as, "It is clear to everyone that it is impossible to achieve a further lessening of international tension if a normalisation of relations between the great powers is secured," or "The Soviet Government stood and stands on the conditions that the Capitalist and Socialist systems may fully and peacefully co-exist and economically co-operate between themselves," or even "We have no desire to isolate the United States from Europe?" That sort of stuff can rank only as verbiage. It offers nothing concrete. There is no suggestion that Russia should make any concessions in her international policies. Mr. Malenkov believes that the free world and Communism can live side by side, provided, of course, Communism—social, political or militant—is left unimpeded to promote its international designs. Mr. Malenkov deplores there is no lessening of world tension, but says nothing himself calculated to contribute to that desirable aim. If Mr. Malenkov's speech is intended to set the keynote for the Communist conference, a repetition of the barren Berlin interlude would appear to be inevitable. It is hardly conceivable that the Soviet Premier could have been more negative; to have uttered so many words without offering a gleam of hope for a closer understanding of international problems.

Talks On Indo-China May Open In Week's Time

Save My Wife Appeal To Eisenhower

Donn, April 27.
Nikolai Khokhlov, former Captain in the Soviet Secret Police, today appealed to President Eisenhower to save his wife Yanina, whom he left behind in Moscow when he gave himself to the Americans in Frankfurt. He asked President Eisenhower to do his utmost to save a woman "whose only fault is that she followed the commandment thou shalt not kill."

THE PETROV CASE

Royal Commission Named

Canberra, Apr. 27.
The Australian Government has selected three judges to form the Royal Commission which is to enquire about the former Soviet agent, Vladimir Petrov's allegations. The judges, whose names are expected to be officially announced within a few hours, are Judge Philip of Queensland, Judge Scholl of Melbourne, Victoria, and Judge Owen of Sydney, New South Wales. The Australian Prime Minister, Mr. Robert Menzies, had urged the Cabinet to select three judges from different states who are entirely free from any political background. The Royal Commission is unlikely to begin hearings before the end of May when they will adjourn after a brief legal argument until more documents are translated. Meanwhile, the Australian Embassy staff in Moscow still have not received their exit visas and travel reservations for tonight's train to Helsinki, the Australian Charge d'Affaires, Mr. Bryan C. Hill, said today. He added that after a half-hour interview with Mr. N. P. Koptsov, chief of Australian affairs at the Soviet Foreign Ministry, he still had no definite indication as to when the Australians would receive their visas. However, it was believed the visas would be received in time for Thursday's Helsinki train. —France-Press.

No Disciplinary Action Against US Colonel

Washington, Apr. 27.
The Marine Corps announced today that no disciplinary action would be taken against Colonel Frank H. Schwable for his germ warfare confession while a prisoner of war in Korea.

The court of inquiry which considered the case found that Colonel Schwable's usefulness to the Marine Corps had been "seriously impaired." The court's finding against disciplinary action was approved by General Lemuel Shepherd, Marine Corps Commandant, the Secretary of the Navy and the Secretary of Defense, Mr. Charles Wilson. In a statement accompanying the findings of the court, General Shepherd said Colonel Schwable's forced confession despite his reluctance constituted "a severe blow" to national interests and that the Colonel's future assignment would have to be restricted to duties making "minimum demands of their successful performance upon elements of unblemished personal example and leadership."

CONFIDENCE RESTORED

Geneva, Apr. 28.
France hopes to obtain Russia's final agreement here today to the calling of peace talks on Indo-China in about a week's time.

M. Georges Bidault and Mr. Vyacheslav Molotov, the French and Soviet Foreign Ministers, are meeting again this morning to try to conclude their talks on who should be invited to the Indo-China negotiations.

M. Bidault then goes straight to a meeting with his British and United States colleagues before Mr. John Foster Dulles, the United States Secretary of State, makes his opening statement to the 19-nation conference on Korea.

Conference circles expect Mr. Dulles to make a strong denunciation of the three-point plan for Korean reunification tabled by General Nam Il, North Korea's Foreign Minister, at yesterday's second session of the Geneva conference.

Mr. Anthony Eden will be in the chair at today's session. The North Korean proposal envisages the setting up of a joint North-South commission to arrange countrywide elections and withdrawal of all foreign troops within six months from the end of the Geneva conference.

Mr. Dulles, who rejected similar Russian proposals for Germany at the "Big Four" Berlin talks only about two months ago, was expected to denounce the North Korean scheme as an attempt to impose Communist rule throughout the peninsula.

A British spokesman here announced last night that the North Korean proposals were "unacceptable" to his delegation. The Indo-China talks to try to end the seven-year-old French war against the Communist Vietnamese rebels will probably be held simultaneously with the Korean debate. What M. Bidault and Mr. Molotov hoped to decide today was how many nations—apart from the "Big Four" and Communist China—should be invited to attend the meeting.

CHIEF DISAGREEMENT
Main disagreement after yesterday's Bidault-Molotov meeting was whether or not the rebel forces would be invited to send a delegate here. Mr. Molotov said he should. M. Bidault was against it because the rebel territory is not recognised as a state—except by the Communist nations. But M. Bidault is expected to concede the point rather than delay the talks too long.

The two statesmen agreed yesterday that the conference should be kept small. Diplomatic quarters here think it unlikely that neighbouring countries like India, Burma, Thailand and Indonesia will be invited, though the Associated States of Indo-China—Vietnam, Laos and Cambodia—will be.

The impression is gaining ground among Western delegates here that the French military situation, dubbed "desperate" by many last week, is perhaps not so serious as was feared. It is also believed that the beleaguered and badly smashed French fortress of Dien Bien Phu can hold out longer than had been thought.

The British Government's decision, announced by Sir Winston Churchill yesterday, not to commit itself to military support of the French in Indo-China while the Geneva conference was in progress, brought praise from many Western delegates here.

The conference has not really tackled matters of substance yet. But the swift and easy progress made in settling the procedural arrangements would not have been possible, it is felt, if Britain or any of France's allies had decided in advance of the meeting to aid the French Union forces. —Reuter.

CONFIDENCE RESTORED
Geneva, Apr. 27.
The second day of the Geneva Conference has restored confidence both to what one might call the professional optimists and to the more sceptical.

There is clearly a general wish to reach agreement on Indo-China, according to those privileged to hear the story of the latest conversations. One of the most significant conversations to be held was between the French Foreign Minister, M. Georges Bidault, and the Soviet Foreign Minister, Mr. Molotov. It was rapid but important, and dealt with the question of which powers should be invited to attend the talks. This has not yet been finally decided and it will undoubtedly be difficult to reach a decision.

It is certain that the Powers will agree to the participation of the Associated States of Indo-China but these States refuse to sit at the same conference table as the representatives of the Vietnamese leader, Ho Chi-minh. Naturally M. Molotov is in favour of inviting the Vietnamese representative to attend the Conference. The Americans, not opposed to the principle on the grounds that it would be difficult to achieve a cease-fire without agreement between both parties.

In any case, once the list of powers to be invited has been drawn up, each of the Powers will send invitations to the country with which it entertains diplomatic relations. The Bidault-Molotov talks, which have avoided Four-Power talks to which the Russians are opposed, and the Five-Power talks which the Western Powers have refused to consider, are to be continued tomorrow.

By this means it would appear likely that Indo-China will be discussed in the Conference proper. Any agreement may prove to be the most significant in this Conference.

LOBBY TALKS
The French-Soviet talks will be completed by Thursday, a dinner to be given by the British Foreign Secretary, Mr. Anthony Eden, will be held, not the only "lobby" talks to have taken place.

Nurse's Body Found

FOUL PLAY IS SUSPECTED

Stratford-on-Avon, Apr. 27.

Britain's ace murder investigator arrived here today to probe the death of a woman who was drowned in the river Avon, near the tomb of William Shakespeare.

The detective, Superintendent John Capstick of Scotland Yard, held a conference with local police chiefs. Squads dragged the river for a tombstone believed to have been tied to the body of the woman when she fell—or was thrown into the water.

Literary pilgrims, wandering around the old streets of half-timbered houses in the poet's birthplace, were distracted from their musings by the sight of police shifting through litter baskets for clues.

The dead woman, nurse Olive Bennett, 45-year-old Scottish midwife, worked at a maternity home about two miles from Stratford. She left the home on Friday for her afternoon off—"in happy mood"—according to colleagues here.

Her body was found in the river the next day. Spring flowers sprinkled in the water by schoolchildren to mark Shakespeare's birthday celebrations, floated gently over it. The "amorous swans of Avon" glided peacefully by.

Mr. James Stanley, assistant Chief Constable of Warwickshire, said today: "foul play is suspected."

Stratford is crowded this week with visitors from many parts of the world, here for the annual Shakespearean celebrations. Detectives are planning to interview many of the pilgrims who have recently visited Shakespeare's tomb in the churchyard of Holy Trinity. Nurse Bennett was last seen there on Friday.

On Saturday, a gardener found her hat and handbag on a leafy stretch of the towpath known as "lovers' lane" not far from the memorial theatre, where actors are playing the Bard's love tragedy, "Romeo and Juliet."

Superintendent Capstick, renowned for his painstaking methods of investigation, has been called to solve several of the most recent murder cases in Britain. —China Mail Special.

THE INDO-CHINA CRISIS

Eisenhower May Seek Meeting With Churchill

Washington, Apr. 27.
Usually authoritative sources suggested today that President Eisenhower might seek a meeting with the British Prime Minister, Sir Winston Churchill, if he is convinced by his defence chiefs that only immediate intervention can save Indo-China.

This idea came out as the result of Sir Winston's statement in the House of Commons today that Britain is not prepared to send any forces to Indo-China until the Geneva conference has discussed that problem.

Admiral Arthur W. Radford, Chairman of the United States Joint Chiefs of Staff, is coming here today to tell President Eisenhower the results of London talks in which he reportedly failed to persuade Sir Winston to join in immediate action to save Indo-China.

The sources said that some high Defence Department officials are understood to feel that not only Dien Bien Phu but a lot more of Indo-China may be lost if Britain waits at Geneva to see what the Communists will do about Indo-China since they could take a month or more at this.

The sources pointed out that by plane it would only take a few hours for President Eisenhower and Sir Winston to meet, but they assumed that Mr. Eisenhower would want to consider the views of the Secretary of State, Mr. John Foster Dulles, at Geneva and the Congressional leaders as well as the Joint Chiefs of Staff before proposing such a meeting.

PRESENT VIEWPOINT
They understood that it is still the Administration's viewpoint that the United States will not undertake direct action in Indo-China unless Britain does, too, and that action must be preceded by the setting up of the Pacific Treaty Organisation (PATO) to guarantee Southeast Asia.

The sources contended that a skeleton PATO could be set up here without delay as military representatives of all the nations involved, except Cambodia and Laos, are here. Later, it could be transferred to a permanent headquarters, presumably in the Philippines, they suggested.

Meantime, they said, that the Assistant Secretary for Far Eastern Affairs, Mr. Everett F. Drumright, late yesterday called in the Cambodian Ambassador, Mr. Nong Kimmy, to discuss with him what further military aid Cambodia needs to be able to defend itself against continued aggression. —United Press.

NIXON RAISES POINT

Washington, Apr. 27.
The question of a possible participation by the United States in the Indo-China conflict was raised today by Vice-President Richard Nixon at a meeting of the governors of the 48 American states, a well-informed source revealed. Although the meeting was held in secret, it was understood that the question was raised by Mr. Nixon in a general review of the international situation. London, Apr. 27.

As a result of disclosures made by Vladimir Petrov, former Third Secretary of the Russian Embassy in Canberra, all is clear now to British Intelligence about the missing diplomats Burgess and Maclean, writes the Daily Express crime reporter, Percy Hoskins.

Petrov has revealed the whereabouts of the diplomats, how they are employed and how they are paid. He has also told Australian security officers the names of those who planned the escape route which Burgess and Maclean took three years ago.

Petrov, former Russian secret police chief in Australia, has also told who helped the diplomats to get across the Continent.

Heavily guarded couriers are daily bringing to London these secrets and others concerning disappearances and kidnappings to behind the Iron Curtain.

Madame Petrov, who was formerly a cypher clerk in the Embassy, was a key operative in the MVD. It is revealed. "NO KNOWLEDGE" OF ALLEGED RED MOVE Paris Comment On Intervention In Indo-China War

Paris, Apr. 27. A French military spokesman said today there was "absolutely no knowledge" in Paris of reports that 18,000 Chinese Communists had marched into Indo-China to join the Vietminh.

An American National Broadcasting Corporation correspondent, Don Whitehead, reported from Hongkong last night that Communist China had sent three divisions — 18,000 men — into the Indo-China war.

Vietminh artillery maintained a "softening up" barrage at Dien Bien Phu last night but Communist infantrymen held back for the fourth consecutive night.

Reports reaching Paris from Indo-China said defenders of the northern fortress used the respite to improve their defence works.

The French military spokesman said a daily average of 170 tons of supplies is being parachuted into the fortress. They include half a ton of ice dropped for wounded troops in Dien Bien Phu's underground hospital.

Nineteen doctors and five surgical teams were tending the wounded, whose number had never exceeded 800, he said.

Forced Labour In Russia? "That's False"

— Says A Russian

United Nations, Apr. 27. The Soviet delegate, Mr. Semyon Tsarapkin, asserted today that Russia had been falsely accused in the United Nations of forced labour.

He told the Economic and Social Council, which is debating slave labour, that reports of such labour in the Communist orbit had been inspired by United States psychological warfare.

Mr. Tsarapkin contended that the American aim was to divert attention from questions of economic development and normalisation of international trade, which were "distasteful" to the United States.

The United Nations Committee that reported on forced labour conditions last year had ignored conditions in the United States, such as labour by Mexican "wetbacks" and Negroes from the Caribbean region.

Mr. Tsarapkin said that the Chairman of the Committee had had little experience in labour matters except when, as the Prime Minister of the Indian State of Mysore, he had sent two labour leaders to jail.

Mr. Tsarapkin was referring to Sir Ramaswami Mudaliar, United Press.

Former PoWs In Korea Join Nationalist Army

Taipei, Apr. 27. The majority of the 14,000 Chinese ex-PoWs who came to Formosa rather than return to Red China have been integrated into the Nationalist Chinese Army.

The process of placing them in units and training centres was to take some two weeks, the authorities revealed. Almost all of the ex-Red soldiers would be assigned to infantry outfits.

In appeals signed with blood the men asked to be given front-line posts in the promised counter-attack against Red China. Most got their wish.

About 150 have been given scholarships to enter the National University. Others will attend army and civilian specialist training schools. An unspecified number, probably under 200, are to be retired in "honourable soldiers' homes." Others, too old or physically unqualified for military duty will be urged to take civilian jobs.

Nationalist leaders here insist that the entire procedure has been voluntary. They say the vast majority of the ex-PoWs have asked to be used as shock troops against the Communist armies.

The Nationalists plan to take every advantage of the protracted military experience of these men, some 7,000 of whom were once Nationalist regulars before the fall of the mainland.

Win For Eisenhower On Farm Bill

Washington, Apr. 27. President Eisenhower won an important test on farm legislation today when the Senate rejected a farm-bill — attempt to continue high-level price supports on basic crops.

The vote was 48 to 40. The test came on a move to tie to the Administration's Wool Support Bill an amendment to continue present price supports at 80 per cent of fair-price parity on basic farm crops.

Senator Allen J. Ellender, Democrat, sponsor of the amendment, modified it an hour before the vote in a bid to gain support. But the effort failed. Mr. Ellender's proposal would have continued the present 80 per cent level on the so-called basic crops — cotton, wheat, peanuts and tobacco — for one year after the present expiration date at the end of this year.

The Administration wants the high-level supports to expire on all except tobacco on schedule, December 31.

In separate legislation, now pending before the Senate Agriculture Committee, the Administration is asking for a system of "flexible" price supports. United Press.

All Ready For Asian Conference

Nehru Optimistic

Colombo, Apr. 27. The Indian Prime Minister, Mr. Nehru, said on his arrival in Colombo today he was "optimistic" about the prospects of the conference of Asian Prime Ministers, opening tomorrow.

Asked if he would seek the support of the Indian people, Mr. Nehru said: "I am not sure. I am not sure of the support of the two thousand million people of the world."

"It is for the people to support it," he said. "It is not my job to ask them to support it. These are public issues. We confer together. We try to find a way to make suggestions."

Mr. Nehru said he would like to see a "show of power" on the part of the Asian countries. He said: "We have to face difficult situations. If there was a magic remedy, it would be a problem."

Chinese Eat Spaghetti

REDS CALL FOR BIG STRIKE

Paris, Apr. 27. The Communist-led General Confederation of Labour made a last appeal today to its four million members to respond to tomorrow's 24-hour general strike call. The Catholic Trade Union Confederation is giving its support to press wage claims.

The abstention of the Socialist Force Ouvrière and independent unions and conflicting orders from national and local leaders have made most unlikely any total stoppage of public services or private industry. The Government has planned an emergency.

All three big labour groups are behind the month's old campaign to raise the minimum wage from the present 23,000 francs monthly (about £25.85) to 25,100 francs (about £28.12).

But the Socialists claimed Communists were using the strike as a political weapon to embarrass France at the opening of the Geneva conference.

ELECTIONS Seen As Dominant Problem Of Geneva Conference

"ALMOST INSOLUBLE"

Geneva, Apr. 28. Opening statements yesterday by the North and South Korean Foreign Ministers quickly brought to a head the problem that will dominate the Geneva conference — how to get the two blocs to agree on a definition of Democratic elections.

The difference between the Communist and non-Communist viewpoint on this subject has been repeatedly demonstrated since World War II, Germany being the most recent example.

All Western delegations are convinced that this is an almost insoluble problem.

So far only a British spokesman has publicly described the North Korean plan as unacceptable to his delegation. But Mr. John Foster Dulles, the United States Secretary of State, is also almost certain to reject it when he speaks today.

The South Korean demand that free elections take place only in the north because South Korea is a free country was rejected by the United Nations observer group. The Republic of Korea has rejected the proposal.

But diplomatic quarters believe South Korea would agree to new elections throughout the whole peninsula if agreement could be reached on methods.

The Colombian Ambassador to Washington, Mr. Zuleta Angel, spoke for the non-Communist delegates when he put forward the plan approved by the United Nations General Assembly.

It is extremely unlikely that the Communists will move from their previous rejection of the United Nations plan especially since the organisation represented "the other side" in the war. There is no historical precedent for such a situation.

Officials say the "Korean group" which fought under the United Nations banner, will also oppose the Communist demand for evacuation of all foreign troops within six months.

But the rapid build-up of the South Korean forces may eventually lead to the groups deciding that South Korea is in a position to defend itself against another possible attack from the north.

The Western powers hope that failing agreement on the country's reunification it may be possible to find an acceptable form of partition and a phased withdrawal of foreign troops.

One fear in their minds, however, is that President Rhee might one day translate his words into action and "go it alone" in an effort to capture the north. — Reuter.

Commenting on the Colombian proposal for free elections in Korea under United Nations supervision the spokesman said the Colombian delegate did not mention anything which would ensure conditions for such elections.

He did not mention the question of the withdrawal of all foreign forces from Korea.

"He mentioned that free elections be held under United Nations supervision."

"However the United Nations has to admit that it is one of the belligerents in the war. Therefore the United Nations has no reason whatsoever to continue interfering in Korea's internal affairs."

"Furthermore the United Nations seems to have nothing to do with this Geneva conference," the Chinese spokesman said.

Wick Doesn't "Work" It "Warks": Dispute Over Motto

China Claims Trade Expansion

London, Apr. 28.

Communist China's trade with capitalist countries had steadily expanded since 1953 in spite of the "embargo".

A New China News Agency special correspondent said today in commenting on Peking's Ministry of Foreign Trade figures showing a 36 per cent increase in China's foreign trade last year compared with 1952.

The correspondent said also that "United States efforts to impose a blockade on China failed to retard China's economic development and have only damaged the countries which followed the American policy."

He recalled that during the Moscow international economic conference in 1953 the Chinese delegation signed trade agreements totalling 223 million United States dollars with businessmen delegates from 11 countries, including Great Britain.

China also concluded a Peking trade agreement for two-way trade worth 200 million with Japanese economic delegates, the correspondent said.

All these agreements and contracts have reflected the pressing demands of people throughout the world for improving and expanding normal international trade relations, particularly for restoring and developing trade with China, the correspondent said. — Reuter.

Spandau Talks Continue

Berlin, Apr. 27. Four power talks on easing conditions for the seven top Nazi war criminals held in Spandau Prison made "further progress" today, a Western spokesman reported.

Advisers of the British, United States, French and Soviet High Commissioners are meeting again on Thursday for the fourth time.

The Western powers have proposed that very sick prisoners should be given hospital treatment outside prison. That they should be allowed to wear mail and visitors and that there should be a possible revision of sentences. — Reuter.

She Tells How To Sell Cars To Americans

New York, Apr. 25. An admiral's daughter, Miss Elizabeth Plunkett-Erle-Drax, whose family lives in Dorset, England, is finding she can sell four or five British cars a week to Americans by British understatement.

Miss Erle-Drax, as she is known here as a saleswoman for Rootes Group Motors Inc., said in an interview in the New York Times today she merely answered potential customers' questions, let them make their own minds and found they usually came back to buy.

She is the daughter of Admiral Sir Reginald A. H. Plunkett-Erle-Drax, Royal Navy retired ("Old Blunk" by his lower deck nickname).

She told the newspaper she would become an American citizen in "a year and a bit." She became interested in the United States when her father was Commander-in-Chief of the American East-India station in Bermuda from 1932 to 1934.

Her interest in cars began in wartime. — China Mail Special.

Testimony Will Rock Australia

Petrov Will Tell Inside Story Of Espionage

Sydney, Apr. 27. The anti-Communist world gained a powerful weapon when Vladimir Petrov dramatically chose freedom in Canberra. This Igor Gouzenko of Australia is preparing to expose Kremlin intrigue in an increasingly important theatre of the cold war.

The 45-year-old Third Secretary of the Soviet Embassy is readying to tell, for the first time from the inside, the story of how Russia spied on Australia, key Western ally in the South Pacific and a member of the ANZUS Pact.

His testimony before a Royal Commission of Inquiry is expected to rock Australia with reverberations. Even before he emerges into the limelight of the Royal Commission the bolt to freedom of the alleged MVD undercover agent will have become a factor in the outcome of Australia's May 29 General Election.

Until the genial but bland Russian diplomat takes the witness stand he will live and work in tightly guarded isolation.

And like Gouzenko he will continue to live with the full protection of the Government, hidden away from possible Communist retaliation after the headlines subside. There are numerous parallels in the cases of Petrov and Gouzenko.

Both were Soviet diplomatic employees overseas and both handled secret coded documents. Both took a mass of secret documents with them when they "went over" to the cause of freedom. Each said he was disillusioned with the Communist way of life and feared returning to Russia.

Observers believe that Petrov's testimony will disclose Moscow's evaluation of Australia, perhaps that of New Zealand, and the third ANZUS partner, in Soviet world strategy.

Ever since Pearl Harbour the Russians have maintained a vigorous diplomatic establishment in Australia. Up till the breaking-off of diplomatic relations it was not large—seven diplomatic officials were officially listed and perhaps a dozen employees such as cooks, chauffeurs, etc. But it has always been suspected of close links with the noisy and arrogant Australian Communist Party. The "Commos," as they are called, have a long and sorry record of provoking strikes, but in the past years their power and influence have been drastically reduced.

Petrov's testimony will be important beyond the shores of Australia because of Australia's strategic value through her

Labour Governments in London and Canberra initiated most of these projects right after the war. The Australians unsuccessfully tried to interest Washington in using the big—and expensive—rocket

The Conservative Governments of Britain and Australia carried on and expanded the projects. At various times during the Labour regime the Australian Press charged that the United States declined to exchange much secret information with Britain for fear it would leak out in Australia.

Mr. Menzies, when he dramatically told Parliament of the Petrov case, said that the inquiry would show the systems of espionage the Russians were using and on what they were spying.

Whatever the repercussions abroad, Mr. Menzies has already predicted that some of Petrov's disclosures will sound Australian. That is because of the hundreds of documents Petrov handed over to convince Australian officials he was no Soviet

JACOBY ON BRIDGE

Never Miss Various Types of Bidding

By OSWALD JACOBY

TODAY'S hand is taken from last year's contest for the Vanderbilt Cup to illustrate a point of bidding that most bridge players overlook. Only the exceptional player tries to keep track of which side the hand belongs to.

When Edgar Kaplan, the New York expert whose team won the Vanderbilt Cup last year, held the South cards he decided to open the bidding. It's a debatable opening bid, with only one back in high-card strength out of the hearts, and many experts would prefer to pass instead of bid. Nevertheless, Kaplan's decision to bid cannot be called eccentric; it's a borderline hand.

Perhaps West was a bit timid to pass, but this was another borderline case. Ruth Sherman, with the North cards, had a perfectly normal response of two hearts.

The response of two hearts showed about 4 to 10 points in a hand with support for hearts. Kaplan knew that his partner might have only 4 or 5 points in high cards, and he could count only 11 points in his own hands. It was clear that the opponents had a majority of the 40 points in the deck. Hence the hand belonged to the enemy.

If South timely passed, West might reopen the bidding and get what belonged to him. Hence Kaplan decided to bid again in the hope of keeping the enemy out. And he decided to bid game rather than just three hearts partly for the moral effect of this show of strength and partly because there might even be a play for the game if North had all her strength in clubs.

As it turned out, South was down two. Nobody could double him, and the loss of 100 points was cancelled by his honours.

At the other table East and West bid up to four spades. This could have been defeated, but North and South decided not to risk it. They bid five hearts and were doubled. The loss here was 400 points.

This difference of 400 points was largely due to the fact that one player knew what was going on and made sure that his opponents couldn't find out.

CARD SENSE

Q—The bidding has been: North East South West 1 Heart Pass 2 Clubs Pass 2 Spades Pass

You, South, hold: Spades 9-2, Hearts K-Q-8, Diamonds 8-5-3, Clubs A-Q-J-6-3. What do you do?

A—Bid three hearts. You have already shown about 10 points as a minimum for your response of two clubs. You can now show your heart support, but you have no extra strength to justify a jump to four hearts.

TODAY'S QUESTION

The bidding is the same as in the question just answered. You, South, hold: Spades Q-2, Hearts K-Q-8, Diamonds 8-5-3, Clubs A-K-Q-3. What do you do?

A Montegut band was playing a waltz, and Ian Curlew was dancing with Zava, the reigning beauty. From his place of concealment behind a bar, a sardonic smile, Knicker watched. Suddenly a duck sang out. Mrs. Frame had ducked some while before and the bullet shattered a pile of ice-cream on a table at which sat a man in a suit and a suet-waster. In another table he ducked as Mrs. Frame had done and presently another bullet shattered a hat left there by a customer. They ducked before the shot is fired.

YOUR BIRTHDAY... By STELLA

WEDNESDAY, APRIL 28

BORN today, you have one of those strong, dogmatic personalities which will push anything through to a successful conclusion. You are quite independent and must have the lesson of co-operation if you are to reap the rewards of the talents which have been given you by the stars.

You would make a fine politician, for you know how to handle people and get them to do exactly what you want them to do at the right time.

Although you are intuitive, you are not to laugh at this and often try to "think things out" carefully. As a result, you may become more confused. Act on your first decision, for they will usually be the most correct.

Fond of members of the opposite sex, you will probably have several opportunities to wed. Select your mate wisely, for the first one may change partners more than once.

Among those who were born on this date are: General Benmore, actor James Morrocco, film U.S. President, and Harold Bauer, pianist.

VIRGO (Aug. 24-Sept. 23)—Take time right now to make future business plans. Your head should be good and clear now.

CAREER WOMEN IN THE KITCHEN

Miss Ward Serves Three Courses

By HELEN BURKE

HOW do career women manage their catering? How can a girl set about single-handed entertaining when she gets home after a busy day at work?

I found some interesting answers to these questions from two women who have reputations for the quality of their entertaining.

Miss Angela Ward, forget-me-not-eyed model with a 22-inch waist, loves good food—which must be some thing of a trial for her and a menace to her figure. But she remains slim and gay, lives high up in Kensington and has made a garden on her roof.

GREEK TOUCH

Angela's kitchen is so tiny that she can reach everything she wants without moving, but she manages to serve three-course meals from it—all three sometimes hot. A fruit pie goes into the oven when a roast comes out, or it may be heated if she has had time to make it beforehand.

I found that, for the most part, Angela uses olive oil in place of butter, or, perhaps, with butter; this is explained by the fact that she is half Greek. She does not use a cookery book.

Angela asked me: "Have you ever tried ice-cream wafers for cocktail biscuits?" I had not, but, when I got home, I made some from her recipe and found them very good. Sprinkle the wafers with grated cheese (mouse-trap will do). Brown them under the grill.

CHICKEN

For Angela's chicken dish: Buy a young rooster for four people and cut it into suitable joints. Cover with milk and simmer very gently for 45 minutes. Meanwhile, cover the giblets with water, add a bouquet of carrot and onion, a bouquet of garni and seasoning, cover and simmer. Lift out the chicken, drain and dry. Strain the stock from the giblets into the remaining milk, taste and season. Thicken with beurre manie, add a little finely chopped parsley or, if you guests like them, a few chopped chives. That makes the first course.

WITH HONEY

For the second, egg and breadcrumb the chicken pieces and fry them in hot oil to a golden brown. Drain, cooked cauliflower in beaten egg only, fry them to a golden brown in the hot fat and serve them and thinned new potatoes with the chicken.

The French call it "Pain perdu"; we call it "French toast" and, I suppose, the Greeks have a word for it. It consists of slices of bread dipped in beaten egg and milk, flavoured with vanilla, then gently fried to a golden brown in clarified butter. Angela serves this sweet with cinnamon and honey, which is the Greek part of it. A little different, and very good.

LAST MINUTE

MRS MOLLY THOMAS is a London buyer of smart fashions who likes making fast or last-minute dishes, mainly prepared in advance.

One of her favourite menus (mine, too) is Creme Vichyssoise, followed by baby poussins cooked in butter in a casserole, with white wine and a touch of onion. I think Mrs Thomas is very courageous for she actually makes "Onionet" (surprise or "Baked Alaska" with hidden under the meringue, black cherries which have rested for an hour in Kirsch).

Here is her own recipe: Place a block of ice cream on a slice of sponge cake, a little less than two inches larger all round. Place the stoned black cherries on the ice cream and all around it. Cover completely with meringue, sealing all edges, then bake for three minutes in a very hot oven (475-480 deg. Fahr.).—(London Express Service)

Shoulder Care For Formal Wear

Bare-top formals need pretty shoulders to set them off.

It might be just as well if some of the girls who wear bare-tops carried a bit of shoulder covering. Or, they should have some remoulding treatments and do exercises. In those establishments where plump ladies go for the purpose of having their fatty tissue reduced, there are mechanical machines and strong armed massage operators that wage war on fat.

Carriage is important. Correct posture not only imparts distinction of appearance but it hides collarbones that loom up on the too-slender lassies and often it may form a shelf on the upper portion of the back of the heavyweight.

Shoulders, chest and upper arms require a certain amount of surface attention if the girl in the evening formal is to qualify for good-looking laurels. If the skin is rough, if tiny red points of gooseflesh are present, a thorough creaming with plenty of friction will improve conditions.

Powdering must not stop at the throat, but must continue

—She was a Very Funny Pet of Mr. Punch's—

By MAX TRELL

KNARF and Hanid, the shadow-children with the turned - about names, were puzzled to see their friend Mr Punch sitting at his desk drawing a picture of a black bear. After drawing a picture of the black bear walking on four legs Mr Punch drew her lying down, and rolling over.

Finally, Knarf and Hanid asked Mr Punch why he was drawing so many pictures of a bear.

Not A Bear At All

Mr Punch raised his eyebrows in astonishment and said: "Mr Knarf, this isn't a bear. This is my favourite bear! This is Little Buttercup!"

Knarf and Hanid now remembered that Little Buttercup was a bear which had been a pet of Mr Punch.

"Where is Little Buttercup now?" Knarf asked.

Mr Punch shook his head sadly: "I don't know," he said. "That's why I'm drawing pictures of him." Mr Punch sighed, "I often tried to take photographs of Little Buttercup with my camera, but Little Buttercup spoiled most of the pictures. She never washed her hands before touching them. She got them so full of paw marks that, by and by, the pictures were no longer pictures of Little Buttercup but of Little Buttercup's paws. 'Now Buttercup,' I told her one day, 'you really don't know how to handle photographs. It's a lot of trouble using a camera. I think it would be a good idea if you would learn to use the camera yourself.'"

"What did Little Buttercup say to that?" Hanid asked Mr Punch.

"It was hard to know what Little Buttercup really meant when she said anything," Mr Punch replied. "It just sounded like 'wuf' which could mean yes or no or almost anything else. At any rate, I gave her the camera and told her to take some pictures of me. 'Just push that little button,' I told her."

"Did she?" asked Hanid.

Mr Punch sighed again. "A very strange thing happened," he said; "instead of pushing the button on the camera, poor Little Buttercup, who was always hungry, opened her mouth. Instead of snapping a picture, she snapped at the camera. It disappeared down her throat. Knarf and Hanid uttered exclamations of dismay. "What did you do?" they cried.

Mr Punch was drawing pictures of his favourite bear.

"Fortunately," said Mr Punch, "I knew just what to do. I gave her a whack on the back and the camera came flying right out again. But when I developed the pictures—oh, dear!"

Inside Pictures

Mr Punch shook his head sadly. "When I developed the pictures, I found I had pictures of Little Buttercup's teeth, her tongue, her tonsils, the inside of her neck and the back of her face. But I never did get a good picture of the front of her face. And then, shortly after all this happened, Little Buttercup went away and I never saw her again."

"And so," said Mr Punch, "this is why I am drawing pictures of how I remember Little Buttercup looked. For the only pictures I do have are the ones covered with her paw marks and those taken of her teeth and tonsils when she swallowed the camera. Poor Little Buttercup."

Knarf and Hanid repeated: "Poor Little Buttercup!" But they couldn't help smiling because, in spite of everything, Buttercup was a very funny bear.

Rupert and the Lost Cuckoo—6

There is no shortage of blackberries, and Rupert is soon busy. Before he has filled the basket there is a gentle snuffling noise and Horace the hedgehog appears. "Hallo, you're just the person to explain where the berries are," says the little bear. "I've seen such strange birds. They were talking of birds; there is something queer going on. Horace interrupts. 'Can you hear what I can hear?' Rupert replies: 'I do hear something. Behind the bushes at the end of the cuckoo, small but clear.' ALL RIGHTS RESERVED

Bernard Hunt Is Britain's Brightest Golfing Hope

British golf faces one of its strongest-ever overseas challenges this season. South African Bobby Locke, at his fittest and best, leads an assault party that includes such players as Antonio Cerdá of Argentina and Belgium's Flory van Donck.

An impressive trio. But when the honours are tallied up at the end of the season, I fancy another name will head the list—Bernard Hunt.

COMBINED CHINESE 3, ALL INDIA 1

CHINESE COME THROUGH WITH THREE GOALS IN THE LAST SIX MINUTES

By I. M. MacTAVISH

In a magnificent fighting finish at the Club Stadium yesterday the Combined Chinese changed what looked like certain defeat into glorious victory. The never-say-die spirit of the team was good to see and in a thrilling six minutes' scoring spree they once again drove home the old axiom that no game is won or lost until the final whistle has gone.

But just how near this came to being a very different story only those who saw the game can appreciate. All India, a single goal in the lead, were in command of the situation for a long time and I believe that it was their own tactics, as much as the great fight back of the locals, that swung the pendulum of fortune against them.

As the precious minutes started ticking away the Indians seemed suddenly to realize that victory was very nearly within their grasp. They began to fall back on defence in order to safeguard their slender lead... and it was in this move that they blundered for a team like theirs, planned as it is around an attacking centre-half, does not naturally play negative football.

They tried to do it here and in consequence Chandra Singh got lost in no-man's-land. Panic suddenly showed in the Indian rear lines and the local boys, brilliantly prompted by Chu Wing-keung, were quick to spot their chance and turn it to advantage.

INCESSANT ATTACK

They set up an incessant attack on the Indian defence lines. They smashed through a half-back line that had previously looked so very compact... and goals looked almost inevitable.

But still the Indians held out. Seti turned in a grand display between the posts and Manu and Aziz seemed to be all over the place. The crowd was on the edge of the penalty area, into the net.

Seti made a gallant effort to save it but even his full length dive was of no avail. The significant thing about this goal was that, when it was scored, Chandra Singh was BEHIND the scorer. This should have served as a warning to the Indian defence, but a couple of minutes later Chandra Singh showed both intelligence and coolness when, again unmarked, he accurately lobbed the ball over a bunch of bobbing heads into the net.

The Chinese were now on top of the world and a minute later young Ho Cheung-yau set the perfect seal to this thrilling finish when he rose above everyone in the goalmouth to head the third and final goal.

A few seconds later Referee Turner's whistle ended the game... a game that might have very easily have gone the other way... a game that was so magnificently won... but so misguidedly lost.

STOOD BETWEEN

Wai Fat-kim had a grand game and it was to his great credit that he stood between the boys and their clean sheet at the interval... he alone stood between the Indians and a substantial interval lead.

Hau Yung-sang and Lau Yee played well together while Sato Yui, who deputized for Tung Sheung, was the best half back.

Chu Wing-wah had a very poor game and squandered many chances.

Yiu Cheuk-yin and Mok Chun-wah combined well and in the closing stages were right on top of the opposition.

Lo Kang-chuen and Tung Yee-kit, who played in the first half, were well below form and in the second half they were replaced by Chu Wing-keung and Ho Cheung-yau. Chu had a fine game and his two goals made him the hero of the piece, while young Ho, who took some time to find the pace of the match, finished strongly.

For All-India, Seti had a lot to do and he did it well. He was quick to get down to the ball on the ground, but his tendency to punch the ball occasionally endangered his goal.

Noor was the game's most polished half-back, but in spite of his undoubted ability Chandra Singh lost the place when his side went on the defensive.

In a forward line that for a time played scintillating football Ahmed Khan was once again outstanding. He had a good partner in Jayram who on the early stages of the game had the beating of Hau Yung-sang.

Kittu, who scored the opening goal for India in the second minute after the interval, was a clever ball player, as was centre-forward Thangrai, but neither of them had the punch nor the physique to force their way through the strong Chinese defence.

VERDICT: There is always something thrilling and satisfying in a fight back that produces a last minute victory... but neither side should lose sight of how near this result came to being a very different one... with a little more punch in the India front rank when they were on top, I might have had to write a less cheerful report. And a special word of praise to Referee Turner for a most efficient job in the middle... how refreshing it was to see the 'Advantage Rule' used to advantage.

THE TEAMS

Combined Chinese: Wai Fat-kim; Hau Yung-sang, Lau Yee, Luk Tak-hai, Ng Kee-cheung, Sato Yui; Chu Wing-wah, Lo Kang-chuen (Yiu Cheuk-yin), Tung Yee-kit (Chu Wing-keung), Yiu Cheuk-yin (Ho Cheung-yau), Mok Chun-wah. Flag Of Nations Raised At Asian Games Village

Manila, Apr. 28.

A miniature flag of nations, similar to that of the United Nations, was raised in Diliplan this morning when the different foreign delegations to the Second Asian Games raised their national flags in ceremonies formally inaugurating the Asian Games village.

Diliplan is near Quezon City just north of Manila where the University of the Philippines has been transformed into the Asian Games Village.

Meanwhile, the Asian Games Federation yesterday released the complete agenda at the general meeting of the Council on Friday morning.

The confirmation of four new members—Vietnam, Malaya, Cambodia and North Borneo—headed the order of business.

Also scheduled to be taken up are the applications by Burma and Indonesia to play host for the Fourth Asian Games in 1958.

AFTER SCALPERS

The Mayor of Manila, Mr. Arsenio Lacson, last night directed the Manila police to go after scalpers who are reported to have cornered tickets for the Asian Games.

In creating the special scalpers squad, Mr. Lacson said that he wants to see special efforts on the part of the police to arrest scalpers.

Asian Games officials, on their part, said last night that all necessary steps have been taken to prevent tickets falling into the hands of scalpers and termed reports of scalping activities as most unfortunate.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

A Tribute

Sir—I have watched all three matches the All-India Soccer contingent for the Asian Games played here. I think they are one of the finest bunch of sportsmen ever to visit this Colony. They played hard and fast, their clean, clever tactics a delight to watch.

They certainly spread goodwill here and made good relations even better between the people of India and Hongkong.

Thank you, HKFA for letting them.

"Shubash" (Well done) to each member of the Team.

CRAIGENGOWER AND CYMCA PAIRS QUALIFY FOR LADIES' DOUBLES FINAL

The Craigengower pair of Helen Kwong and Mary Wong and the Chinese YMCA combination of Ulian Khoo and Winnie Cheung both qualified for the final of the Ladies' Doubles event as the Colony Badminton Senior Championships continued at Recreo and Craigengower yesterday.

Ulian Khoo and Winnie Cheung, current holders of the title, accounted for newcomers Cider Ho and Ho Shok-kam by 15-7 and 15-9 and were never seriously challenged at any point of the match.

The other Ladies' Doubles semi-final between Helen Kwong and Mary Wong and Bernadine Remedios, which was expected to be a closely-contested affair, saw a runaway victory for Helen Kwong and Mary Wong in the first set.

Forceful backcourt play by Helen Kwong and deadly forecourt smashes and drops by Mary Wong enabled them to take a substantial 6-0 lead over their erratic opponents who were further handicapped by their inability to click as a combination. Time and again smashes along the middle line turned out to be straight winners.

The Craigengower pair increased their lead to 10-0 and 11-1 before winning the first set by 15-4.

The winners again ran up a lead 4-0 in the second set. Stella Corrie took the spotlight at this stage with a series of follow-up smashes and tap shots from the forecourt to bring her side to 4-4, 7-7 and 8-8. Two over-hits in succession by Corrie and Remedios spelled their doom as their opponents pulled steadily ahead from 10-8 to set and match.

Owing to the inability of the Manila players to land yesterday, only four other games were decided. These included one walkover for Robert Tay and Patrick Wong from Junior Pomeroy and J. A. Motta who was indisposed.

The Championship matches continue this evening at St. Teresa's and Craigengower.

THE RESULTS

At Craigengower

Ladies' Doubles—Ulian Khoo and Winnie Cheung beat Cider Ho and Ho Shok-kam 15-7, 15-9.

Men's Doubles—Patrick Wong and Robert Tay received w/o from J. B. Pomeroy and J. A. Motta.

At Recreo

Ladies' Doubles—F. M. Rozario and J. C. Koh beat M. A. Ebrahim and P. S. Yip 12-15, 15-13, 15-7.

Who is YOUR
H.K. FOOTBALLER OF THE YEAR?

NEVER before has there been so much public interest in Hongkong soccer than during the season now ending. And never before has the Colony boasted so many talented players—players who have given tens of thousands of soccer "fans" clever and thrilling exhibitions of their prowess in this greatest of all local field sports.

The China Mail has, therefore, decided to organise among the followers and supporters of local soccer a Gallup Poll to determine, by popular vote, Hongkong's Footballer of the Year.

China Mail readers are cordially invited to fill in the form below, nominating whom they regard as the Colony's outstanding footballer of the current season.

The two qualifications for nomination are:

- (1) Footballing prowess.
- (2) Sportsmanship on the field of play.

Nominations should be addressed to The Editor, China Mail, Wyndham Street, Hongkong. Entries will close on MONDAY, MAY 10.

The result will be announced on Saturday, May 15.

To the Editor, China Mail.

My nomination for Hongkong's Footballer of the Year, taking into regard his playing ability and his sportsmanship on the field of play is of the Club.

Signed

BILLY KNIGHT AT HOME

Billy Knight, the young English hope, who has recently returned home from Australia, photographed when, defeating J. M. Paulson 6-2, 6-1 in the Cumberland Hard Court Tournament at Halmstad. Knight holds the Australian Junior Championship—Central Press Photo.

This week we have pleasure in welcoming an unexpected guest to the spot of honour at the top of the Tommy Atkins Sports Parade. He is sailorboy Stanton who, with only limited time for practice, took part in the recent New Territories Army Cycling Association 10 Miles Time Trial and turned in such a fine performance that he broke the Colony record for the distance.

Stanton is from HMS Morecambe Bay and his success is another example of the worth of the facilities provided by the NTACA.

Scottish football fans who listened to the broadcast of the Scottish Cup Final on the General Overseas Service of the BBC on Saturday night could not but be impressed with the commentator's praise of Glen, the Aberdeen left-half.

As Army football enthusiasts know, Glen owes much of his present prominence to the publicity he received as a member of the brilliant Young Army team in the United Kingdom when he was doing his National Service.

He entered the Army as a promising junior who had just been taken on to the Aberdeen playing staff. He soon made the Army side and during his two seasons in it he had the unusual distinction of watching his rank on the team sheet change from Private to Lance-corporal then to Officer Cadet and finally to 2/Lieutenant.

He was often selected to captain the Army side, and he has now assured his future outside of football by studying as a B.Sc. at Aberdeen University.

APOLOGIES

I hasten to tender my apologies to Mr. Durnham of the RAMC at 33 General Hospital. Last week I stated in my notes that the FARELF Individual Bantamweight Championship was won by Pte. Kearns of the King's Regt. It was in fact won by Pte. Durnham who won his final bout on a TKO. The error was due to an inaccuracy in a report from Singapore.

Latest news of the Cricket Championship is that the game will be played at Soukumpoo on May 1. RASC are now through to the Final but the opposition is not yet decided.

HQ 35 Brigade have to play HQ 27 Brigade and the winner of that game will meet 98 Med. Bty. RA for the right to represent the Minor Unit League against the strong RASC side. Play in the final will take place between noon and 7 p.m.

There was a large number of soldiers at the model aeroplane contest at Shatin on Sunday morning and there is little doubt that the pastime is a popular one with the more air-minded young members of the Army.

RED DUSTER TROPHY

The Army will be well represented at the boxing competition at the China Fleet Club when the boxers from the RAF challenge the holders, HMS Birmingham, for the custody of the Red Duster Trophy. All the officials—two referees and six judges—will be provided by the Army.

Incidentally this should be an excellent programme as both holders and challengers will be strongly represented. Boxing is due to start at 8.30 p.m. and intending spectators are advised to arrive early to be assured of a seat. It is understood that this is the last Royal Navy boxing programme for this season.

I have been looking through the statistics of the six-a-side Hockey tournament which was played at Soukumpoo on Easter Monday and I wish to offer a belated word of praise to the umpires who during the day controlled 43 games and were in action from 2 p.m. until 6.30 p.m. with just enough time in between to snatch a cup of tea.

When thinking back on the tournament the 7th Royal Tanks must feel that as far as final ties are concerned they have definitely invoked the wrath of some Jinx or other... for by Ripley—believe it or not... this was the 12th time that they have appeared in the final of a hockey competition and they are still awaiting their first win!

Granger and Frazer, the Army soccer players, made headlines in a new sphere during the Hongkong Interport series in Singapore. In company with Brig. Young they took part in a 15 minute sports broadcast over Radio Malaya with commentator Geoff Raymond.

CALDBROOK CUP FINAL

On Friday afternoon at 5 p.m. the footballers of 32 Medium Test RA will go into action on the beautiful turf of the Police Ground at Boundary Street in an effort to win the Caldbrook Cup and so complete their hour of soccer glory by annexing the FARELF Football Championship.

Their opponents will be RASC 'A' who won the Singapore District competition, and then defeated the winners of the Malaya District tournament, to gain this trip to Hongkong.

This should be a very good game and it seems certain there will be a big crowd to see the local cup-winners in action again. The Gunners will carry with them the best wishes of the Colony's football public.

The heights to which Pte. Kelly of the King's Regt. rose in winning his second FARELF Individual Featherweight Championship can now be judged by the announcement that Sgt. Omar, who was beaten by Kelly in the semi-final of the Championships, has been selected to represent Singapore at the Asian Games in Manila. Local reports on the Kelly-Omar bout indicate that it was one of the best in the whole Championship series.

The popularity of Darts in the Army is reflected in the fact that two military teams will contest the final play-off for the championship of the Sun. Miguel Darts League at the Sergeants' Mess, 6 COD, next Saturday. REME Command Workshops, who won Section One of the League, will meet 1st Bn. Royal Norfolk, the winners of Section Two.

AN ENDORSEMENT

When the Hongkong Amateur Billiards and Snooker Association held its annual presentation of prizes the other day the Vice-President, Mr. W. H. Pritchard, paid tribute to the excellent work of Staff-Sgt. Darby in organising the various competitions.

This tribute has been well and worthily earned and I know that his friends in many spheres of the games will endorse this appreciation of his ability to get everything running smoothly.

I have been asked if I can supply any information on Colony archery activities. I understand that there is an archery club, but I am at present unable to give any details. I would be glad to publish the facts about the club if the officials would be good enough to send them to me.

Archery is a grand old sport and an excellent one for the subject. It seems that there is a revival of interest... especially among Servicemen and parents who are anxious to get instructional facilities for themselves and their grown-up children.

TOM DOYLE GOING

The Army soccer team is about to lose the services of another prominent player. Cpl. Tom Doyle, of the 1st Bn. King's Regiment, is due to leave the Colony at the end of this month.

Doyle, who came to the Colony from India, has been with the Army side for comparatively short time, but as soon as he made the first team he showed that he was a player above the average. He will be best remembered by his teammates for the two great goals he scored against South China and Kitchener.

Golfers from the Army formed an important part of the Combined Services team which was defeated by a strong Royal Hongkong Golf Club side at Fanning at the week-end. The Services were beaten by 424 points to 24, but some good golf was played and the match was a most enjoyable one for all concerned.

SNIPPETS: The successful King's boxing team has arrived back in the Colony... soldiers from the Potteries are very interested in the news that Port Vale may visit Hongkong... Army 'A' completed their season in style by winning the End of the Season Hockey Tournament... a sure sign of the season's Goalposts are now being removed from many Army sports grounds... the RASC soccer team from Singapore was at the All-India Cup... the Chinese side of the Club Ground yesterday.

Hollywood.

To kiss or rub noses—this is the question facing the makers of "The Egyptian," currently being filmed on the banks of the Nile. By Hollywood standards a kiss (and more than one) would seem essential to any film dealing with love, even love some 10 or 15 centuries before Christ.

Delving into the art of love-making in those ancient days, film chief Darryl F. Zanuck discovered, however, that kissing was something of a new fashion and that at the actual period the film is meant to depict, it was doubtful if anyone kissed at all. They just rubbed noses.

"Nose-rubbing" commented one of the producers, "ain't exactly box-office romance, but I guess we can hot it up a bit if need be."

Knowing Hollywood, I guess they can.

REMARKABLE

One of the most remarkable documentary films I have ever seen—remarkable for its showing of people normally forbidden to Western eyes—has just begun its first run in New York.

The film is "Out Of This World," photographed in colour by two Americans and telling the story of life in Tibet. The Americans (a Mr. Lowell Thomas and his son) made a two-month stay there—and also helped write a small chapter of history in that the country's ruler, Dalai Lama, only allowed them entry permits because he saw in their visit the chance of getting a personal message back to the President of the United States.

"It was a message," says Mr. Thomas, "appealing for American help to meet the threat of Communism surging on Tibet's borders." Unfortunately, by the time the two film-men had made their journey home and delivered their message, it was too late. The Communists had struck and the Red armies had moved in.

Nevertheless, something did come out of their journey to the forbidden territory. That "something" is a fine and moving film showing glimpses of a hidden world so remote and so much living in the past that even wheels are a new invention. Or they were until mechanised Chinese battalions moved in, cutting off Tibet from the rest of the world more completely than ever.

NO TO JANE RUSSELL

Because she thought that Charles Laughton read Bible passages "so beautifully," Jane Russell asked him if he would preach at her drawing-room services. Mr. Laughton declined with thanks.

Mary Pickford only occasionally goes to night clubs. She will go even less occasionally now as she has just lost a 23-carat emerald-cut diamond clip on one of her rare nights out. A Marilyn Monroe is spending a large chunk of the daylight hours house-hunting. "I just can't find the place we want," she says. Which shows that she is average sometimes anyway.

Mentioning houses, I hear that the James Massey have just sold three of theirs for a nice profit. Nice to have three to sell.

Clark Gable was offered $25,000 for his life story. The offer came from a magazine but Clark turned it down. He doesn't need the cash and "my life isn't finished yet!"

If you've been following Richard Widmark recently you'll appreciate he's quite a success these days. So much so that, since "Hell and High Water" he has put his picture price up. For his next film ("Prize of Gold"), to be made in England, he will get $50,000. Plus expenses. Of course.

Bob Hope (with Dolores and the children) spent Easter at Palm Springs. Bob's latest TV show (with Rosemary Clooney and Jack Benny) is one of the best yet.

SOME FIRM NEWS
After much discussion there is now some firm news about the 1951 comedy-drama by Tennessee Williams, "The Rose Tattoo." Whether or not to make this into a movie has been discussed from studio to studio but it now seems certain that the play is heading for the cameras.

Daniel Mann, who directed the play, will also direct the film. What is more, Anna Magnani (for whom, rumour has it, the play was written) is expected to arrive here from Italy soon to begin rehearsals. Co-starring with her will be Burt Lancaster while another name in the film is Pier Anelli who, by the way, is rapidly becoming thoroughly versed in Hollywood's ways. A far cry from the shy girl who arrived here so long ago from Italy.

FIRST WINNER OF THE SEASON

Newmarket, Apr. 27.
Queen Elizabeth had her first winner of the flat racing season when her two-year-old colt, Corporal, a 100 to 6 chance, made a winning debut in the May Maiden stakes over five furlongs here today.

Corporal, ridden by Harry Carr, raced home ahead of 23 other rivals to win by a length. Earlier, another of the Queen's two-year-olds, Perambulator, ran third with Sir Gordon Richards riding.

Sir Gordon rides Landau who will carry the Royal Colours in tomorrow's 2,000 Guineas classic here.—Reuter.

Increase In British Shipbuilding In First Quarter Of 1954

London, Apr. 28.

World tonnage of merchant ships under construction at the end of March dropped by 127,874 tons compared with December 31, Lloyds Register of Shipbuilding returns reported today.

The total is 6,167,002 tons (1,137 steamships and motorships) compared with 6,294,876 (1,136 ships).

Britain is building 35.28 per cent—323 ships of 2,175,760 tons compared with 313 ships and 2,173,709 tons in the previous quarter.

Germany was the next biggest builder with 10.45 per cent—141 ships totalling 644,391 tons. This compares with 140 ships of 633,904 tons in the previous quarter.

The United States was third with 7.90 per cent—41 ships of 480,953 tons compared with 49 ships of 553,782 tons.

A total of 299 oil tankers were under construction in all parts of the world during the period under review. These consisted of 135 steamships of 2,020,615 tons and 164 motorships of 1,422,025 tons—an overall decrease of 109,260 tons compared with the December figure.

BRITAIN LEADS

Britain was leading in tanker construction with 92 vessels totalling 1,110,998 tons. The United States followed with 22 vessels of 380,778 tons and Germany came third with 32 tankers totalling 348,080 tons.

Sweden was building 25 tankers of 299,519 tons. The Netherlands 27 tankers of 288,597 tons, Japan 20 tankers of 133,060 tons and Norway 13 tankers of 115,260 tons.

Norway was the greatest importer of ships of all types under construction with 62 vessels of 567,474 tons on order.

Liberia followed with 32 ships of 504,701 tons being built for her.—Reuter.

China's Rice A Problem For Ceylon

Colombo, Apr. 27.

Ceylon's offer to sell surplus Chinese rice to other consumer countries has found no response, it was learned here today.

A source said that of the 60,000 tons of rice available from last year's imports of rice from China about 15,000 tons were still on offer.

A spokesman of the Food Ministry, commenting on the surplus rice, said that many of last year's buyers were not interested to renew their purchases.

Japan, he said, which bought 30,000 tons of Chinese rice from Ceylon last year, did not show any interest this year.

The official said that the world market price of rice was steadily declining and it was possible that Japan could purchase rice cheaper from other producing countries.

Under the pact with China, Ceylon would have to take 200,000 tons of rice this year.—United Press.

P2,080,000 Robbery

Buenos Aires, Apr. 27.
 A Belgian textile engineer, Henri Dikler, was robbed of jewels valued at 2,000,000 pesos and 80,000 pesos in cash here on Monday afternoon.

The robbery took place when three well-dressed men, one of them with a drawn revolver, rang the doorbell at Dikler's sixth floor apartment and forced their entry. Dikler refused to answer where the wall safe was, so two of the men searched the house and found Mrs. Dikler, also a Belgian, who was taking a nap in one of the bedrooms.

They tied her to a chair in the bedroom and when Dikler heard blows and screams, he told the man with the revolver that the safe was in the bathroom behind the medicine chest.

Dikler gave the robber the keys. The gunman wrapped the contents of the safe, all jewels and money, in a towel and the three left.

Dikler then discovered that his wife had not been harmed. She said one of the men hit a chair and the other screamed.

JOHN CLARKE'S CASEBOOK Back To Mother

MATTHEW left home when he was still in his teens to fight in the last battles of the 1914-18 war. When he came back to his mother and sisters, he knew what he wanted to be—an actor.

His heroes were the stars of the musical comedies that flourished in those days, and Matthew, still under 20, got a job in the chorus of one such. He graduated from there to better ones. Stardom eluded him, but he was usually in work, either on the stage or, when the cinema found its voice, on the film-set.

Then war came again. Matthew joined civil defence. But when the war was over, he did not return to the theatre or the studio. Instead, he lived on his savings, and made a little besides by breeding Siamese cats.

FOLLOWED

It may be that the bombs had scarred his mind, or that living alone was the cause of his trouble, but for the last three years, the state of his nerves has made a sick man of him.

Now, at 53, he looks an old, ill, man, and though traces of the good looks of his youth remain, his face is grey, and tired, and lined, and there is despair in his troubled, restless eyes.

He walks with a stoop, almost furtively, and wears old clothes as dusty as a tramp's. It was hardly surprising that two policemen, seeing him moseying aimlessly along a street in Marylebone, should have wondered what he was up to.

They saw him take a paper from a rack outside a news-agent's, and followed him into the shop.

ANXIETY

THEY heard him, inside, order a magazine, and two other papers, pay for these, but make no mention of the 3d. local weekly he had taken from the rack. As Matthew walked out of the shop, he was arrested.

Next morning at the Marylebone court, Matthew pleaded guilty to stealing the 3d. paper. The police told his story, including the fact that twice before, in 1938 and 1948, he had stolen from shops—to Mr. Walter Frampton, the magistrate, who then called in a probation officer.

Immediately after his release on bail after the charge, "he went to a doctor who has been attending him for his nerves. I gather from the doctor that there is a serious anxiety state. There has even been talk of suicide. I believe his mother has come down from the North today, to live with him."

CONFUSED

"WHY did you do this?" the magistrate asked Matthew.

"I was confused, sir," Matthew said, his voice pleasant, soft, his accent Scottish. "I was given some sleeping tablets the day before, and I took the lot. Confused, sir, just confused. He drove his hand through his greying hair. He sounded weary, but all of a sudden his tone changed, and there was hope in his voice.

"My mother's looking after me now, sir, so I'll be all right now. I know I will, sir," he said.

"She's 78, sir," the probation officer put in, "and I believe she actually has sold her house in the North to come and be with him."

"Yes, sir, she has," Matthew said. "And a sister will be living near, too. I'll be all right now, with my mother there."

SAFE AGAIN

"WELL, maybe this time you were not entirely responsible for your actions," said the magistrate. "I shall put you on probation. You'll find the probation officer will be another friend to help you."

"Thank you, sir," said Matthew. He timidly made his exit, and went off to where his mother was, to where safety lay from himself at 53.

Wounded By Ricochet Bullet

Spring Garden Lane Incident

The proprietor of the Kwok On Restaurant was injured in the leg by a ricochet bullet when a Police detective opened fire at a middle-aged Chinese man who pulled out a dummy revolver at Spring Garden Lane at 10.11 a.m. today.

The Chinese had been having tea in the Kwok On Restaurant, 109 Queen's Road East, and could not pay when the bill came. As a result there was a dispute and when the proprietor phoned for the Police the Chinese tried to escape. The proprietor gave chase and followed him along Spring Garden Lane.

A detective who was in the area ordered the Chinese to stop, whereupon the man pulled out an imitation revolver. The detective saw this and thought the man was going to fire at him. He immediately drew out his revolver and fired at the Chinese.

The shot missed and ricocheted back, hitting the manager of the shop who was also giving chase. The Chinese was finally arrested and the injured man was taken to the Queen Mary Hospital.

PETROV TALKS

Gouzenko of Red spys in Canada. The leak of Communist spy activities has become a water-fall so that all branches of the intelligence services of NATO will be fully occupied in checking the facts probably for months.

It is not known yet how much of Petrov's disclosures will be made public. Some will certainly be aired before the Royal Commission of investigation is set up in Australia.

Petrov's story, when it can be told in full, will complete the Burgess and Maclean story—the most baffling in the history of British intelligence. Footnote: Today came news of developments in Moscow where Malenkov has reorganised the Government. The most notable change is the setting up of a State Security Committee independent of Sergei Kruglov, the Interior Minister who succeeded Beria. The head of this new committee is General Ivan Serov, formerly Kruglov's deputy who now becomes supreme boss of Russia's espionage and sabotage activities. Serov, a ladies' man and favourite of Stalin, with a long record of undercover arrests in Russia, will have the task of reorganising his foreign services in the light of Petrov's revelations.

There is, of course, constant contact between the three Western Powers who lunched together today and are to do so again tomorrow, between the 10 nations whose representatives conferred this morning, between the Commonwealth delegates and Britain, and between the Chinese, Russians and North Koreans. British Soldier Back In HK After Eight Months In Kwangtung

BY ALEC GREAVES

Held incommunicado by the Army authorities in Hongkong today is a British soldier whose experiences in the past eight months spell the word "mystery."

The Army is maintaining tight-lipped secrecy in the case, and has refused to reveal any details. The mystery man is REME Craftsman M. A. Tobin, an Irishman, who was missing from his unit from August 10 last year until eleven days ago.

Last Saturday week, he was handed over by Chinese Communist guards to the British military authorities at the Shumchun border.

He would not even give the soldier's name. But this information has been obtained from the War Office in London.

He was escorted off the Canton train by Red guards. On stepping over to the Hongkong side, he was immediately whisked away in an Army jeep.

The Army refuses to tell where the man has been in the eight months he has been missing, but it is believed he was in Red China.

Everything concerning the case is being hushed up. But it is known that intelligence officers are closely interrogating the man daily.

The official Army spokesman said: "I'm afraid it is still impossible to give details until investigations have been completed. He admitted: 'The case is, frankly, somewhat complicated.'"

FALCONER WINDING-UP PETITION King Denies Taking Part In Fictitious Sale Of Lifeboat Compasses

A denial that he had been involved with Walter Dunn and Co. and one W. S. Cheang in a plot involving the fictitious sale of lifeboat compasses was made by Mr J. J. O. King, goldsmith and silversmith, of 20 Braga Circuit, at this morning's hearing of his petition for the winding-up of George Falconer and Co. (Hongkong), Ltd. before the Acting Chief Justice, Mr Justice T. J. Gould, at the Supreme Court.

Mr King was being cross-examined by Mr A. J. Clifford, one of the Counsel representing Mr J. B. Ipekjdian and Mr M. W. H. Seymour, shareholders on behalf of Falconer's.

Resuming his questioning from the day before, Mr Clifford asked witness who was responsible for the sorting of letters which came into his office. Witness said the letters would come directly to him. If a letter was for Walter Dunn and Co. (which occupied the same office), it would go directly to Walter Dunn.

As to who actually sorted the letters, witness said this was done by whoever received them. Perhaps the office boy, or anybody else.

Counsel turned to Mr Seymour's main affidavit, where mention was made of a letter from Falconer's to Walter Dunn on the matter of the compasses, and asked witness if he knew about this letter before he saw Mr Seymour's affidavit. Witness agreed that he had seen it, but he could not remember when. This letter was brought to him by one Johnson Wong of Walter Dunn and Company. He did not know why this letter was shown to him by Wong, but it was probably because Wong knew that he had been involved in criminal proceedings, and he thought he (witness) might be interested.

Mr Clifford: Why should he come and consult you about a matter between Walter Dunn and Falconer's?

Witness: He did not consult me. He merely came and showed me the letter, knowing that I was involved in a Prosecution by Falconer's.

How should a sale from Falconer's to Walter Dunn affect you? Why should he show you, after you had left Falconer's?—I thought I made it clear; the sale of the compasses was actually made to Chuen Wo, and not to Walter Dunn.

A FICTITIOUS SALE You now know that was a fictitious sale?—Yes, I know now, by looking through Mr Cheung's affidavit. But I did not know it at the time.

Are you suggesting that Walter Dunn knew?—I don't know, you have to ask Walter Dunn.

I suggest the reason they came and consulted you about the letter was that Walter Dunn, yourself, and W. S. Cheang were all in the plot in, involving the fictitious sale of the lifeboat compasses.—I emphatically deny that.

Mr Clifford then referred witness to a letter written by Mr Williams (manager of Falconer's nautical department) to Walter Dunn, dated October 8, 1953, and asked witness if any person from Walter Dunn's showed him that letter as a matter of interest. Witness replied that he thought he had also been shown that letter by Mr Johnson Wong.

Asked if he knew that in reply to that letter, Walter Dunn wrote saying they had no hand in the transaction in question, Mr King said he did not know anything about that.

"DEFINITELY NOT" Mr Clifford: Does not this letter show that you and Walter Dunn were together in co-operation on this fraud?

Witness: I say definitely not. Replying to another question, Mr King said Walter Dunn's was an "entirely separate outfit from his, and he had nothing to do with the management of the business."

He denied a suggestion that he knew of Walter Dunn's reply to Falconer's on the matter of the compasses, and that it was he who devised that reply so that a contradiction would not show.

Counsel then referred witness to a passage in his affidavit, in which he stated that W. S. Cheang had used a room in Prince's Building, which was in his (witness's) name, to conduct a certain transaction of his own. Asked what sort of transaction this was, witness said he did not know. It was entirely Cheung's business, and he did not ask him about it. Cheang was never employed by him, and was a free-lance man, he added.

Mr Clifford: In our affidavits, we brought an allegation against you of fraud.

Witness: I don't know, that might be.

"ALL MIXED-UP" Do you mean to say that you don't attach any importance to allegations of fraud?—There have been so many allegations of fraud, Mr Clifford, that I am all mixed-up myself.

Mr Clifford referred witness to a relevant passage in an affidavit by Mr Seymour, after which Mr King agreed that it contained an allegation of fraud against himself. Questioned on the matter, he said he did make enquiries from W. S. Cheang about a month or two ago in the face of these particular allegations. He did not ask Cheang as to how the payment for these compasses were made. Further questioned, King agreed that in his affidavit he had said that he took over the account of Marine Suppliers after he left Falconer's. Before taking over that account, he did not ask Cheang as to what the interest on that account related to. No cheques were shown by him on behalf of Marine Suppliers.

He agreed that he took over the name of Marine Suppliers after leaving Falconer's, although he was not given any authority in that firm to sign cheques for that firm.

Witness disclosed that Cheung had loaned him two or three thousand dollars out of the bank account of Marine Suppliers. This was done in order to enable him (witness) to buy a desk, filing cabinet and some thing else, when he first opened his own business of Messrs J. J. King.

Cheung, however, did not actually finance him, matters of his private business, he added.

Hearing is proceeding.

Trial Adjourned: Witnesses Absent

The trial of a 24-year-old student, Ng Chun-chuk, facing two alternative charges of wounding and wounding with intent to do grievous bodily harm, was adjourned to the next Sessions by Mr Justice C. W. Reece, Puisne Judge, at the Criminal Sessions this morning when the Prosecution revealed that two of the witnesses were not in the Colony.

Ng, who was alleged to have wounded another man, Ng Chong, on January 31, pleaded not guilty to the charge. He was represented by Mr V. L. J. D'Alton, instructed by Mr P. L. Lam.

Before opening the case for the Prosecution, Mr G. R. Sneath, Crown Counsel, informed the court that two of the witnesses were absent. One of them was the complainant, Ng Chong, who was now in China. The complainant had written a letter to a friend in Hongkong explaining why he could not come back to give evidence and Crown Counsel applied to have the depositions of the complainant be read in Court. Objecting to the application, Mr D'Alton submitted that depositions of a witness he read when it was proved that his absence from the Colony was due to some involuntary cause. The essential point was that, Mr D'Alton submitted, the accused should have an opportunity to cross-examine the witness.

Mr Reece observed that the accused had been given an opportunity to cross-examine the witnesses during the committal proceedings.

MOTHER VERY ILL

A Chinese herbalist, Ng Chung-chuen, was then called. He testified that he received a letter from the complainant who stated that he had been informed of the date of the trial of the present case and that he was required to attend the Court. The complainant said he was unable to come to Hongkong immediately as his mother was very ill at the time and that he had no brothers or sisters to look after her. With the letter was a bond of $1,000 which was given him after he had testified during the committal proceedings, ensuring his attendance in the Supreme Court. He also requested the witness to pay $1,000 for him should he be fined for his non-appearance in the Court and added that he would repay the money after he returned to Hongkong.

After the letter had been read, Mr Reece said either the depositions of the complainant should be read in Court or the trial adjourned to the next Sessions.

Mr Sneath said he would not object to an adjournment and that he himself would prefer to have the evidence be given in Court.

Mr D'Alton said he would ask for the case be adjourned to the next Sessions.

The accused was allowed bail of $1,000 personal bond and two sureties of $100 each.
